

Eike Gräf is Policy Officer for Fundamental Rights at the European Commission's Directorate General for Justice and Consumers.

He focuses on the effective enforcement of fundamental rights in digital contexts.

Prior to this, he worked on digital policy, and notably on the governance of artificial intelligence, in the private sector and as a researcher. He published the anthology "3TH1CS – A reinvention of ethics in the digital age?", as well as research on automated profiling. Earlier, he worked as a Trainee at the European Data Protection Supervisor. Eike Gräf is a graduate of Sciences Po Paris and the Free University of Berlin. He is affiliated to the Law, Science, Technology and Society research group (LSTS) at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel.