PREAMBLE

In a society founded on respect for democracy and the rule of law as one of the most important constitutional principles a lawyer plays a vital role. The lawyer must serve the interests of justice as well as the interests of those, whose rights and liberties he is entrusted to defend or represent. A lawyer’s function therefore lays on him a number of legal and moral obligations in relation to:
- his clients,
- courts and other authorities before which the lawyer pleads his client’s case or acts on his client’s behalf,
- the public for whom the existence of a liberal and independent legal profession is an essential means of safeguarding human rights and freedoms in face of the power of the state.

The Rules of Professional Conduct for Lawyers are rooted in Act No. 586/2003 Coll. on the Legal Profession and on amending Act No. 455/1991 Coll. on Business and Self-Employment Services (Business Licensing Act) as amended (hereinafter referred to as the “Act”), and in traditions of the Slovak legal profession based on the moral and professional values inherited from the past generations of lawyers and their creative work.

These Rules govern and regulate terms and conditions as well as procedures followed and applied in the course of practising law. Within the limits of law, these Rules of Professional Conduct also apply to the joint practice of law by several lawyers, trainee lawyers and foreign entities operating in Slovakia.

The Rules of Professional Conduct also comprise the lawyers’ code of ethics. They enshrine the rules of professional ethics which a lawyer is obliged to abide by and according to which he shall practise with a view not to bringing the legal profession into disrepute.

PART ONE

LAWYERS AND THEIR PROFESSION

Section 1

(1) A lawyer is a person whose name is entered on the roll of lawyers [Sec. 2(1) of the Act].

(2) For the purposes of the Rules of Professional Conduct for Lawyers (hereinafter referred to as the “Rules”), the lawyer is also a cross-border European lawyer (Sec. 31 et seq. of the Act), registered European lawyer (Sec. 38 et seq. of the Act), foreign registered lawyer (Sec. 46 et seq. of the Act) and an international legal practitioner (Sec. 50 et seq. of the Act).

Section 2

(2) The lawyer is obliged to observe the rules of fair competition and ensure the dignity of the legal profession.

(3) The lawyer may render legal services only within the limits of his independent and liberal practice of law. That shall not apply to any duties and obligations ensuing from the lawyer’s membership in a political party, political movement or interest group, provided that legal services are rendered free of charge. The lawyer may neither participate in any activities of persons, who render legal services without a statutory authority and licence, nor support such activities.

(4) The lawyer shall not accept any representation that would bring the legal profession, its honour and dignity into disrepute. He is entitled to use only such means that are in compliance with the generally binding legal rules, principles of courtesy and ethics.

(3) Without the client’s prior consent, the lawyer shall not have the right to verify, whether the information about the facts of the case supplied by the client is correct, true or complete. If the lawyer has reasonable doubt about the correctness or completeness of the said information, he shall instruct the client about possible legal implications of such information; however, the possibility to withdraw from representation shall not be affected thereby.

(4) As a result of disclosing any information learnt in connection with the provision of legal services about the client or from the client, the lawyer shall not cause any harm to the client and shall not give any advantage to himself or to any third person to the client’s detriment.

(3) The duty of the lawyer and persons assisting him in the provision of legal services not to disclose any information relating to the representation shall even survive termination of such representation.

(4) The lawyer in whose flat or law firm a search is conducted, is obliged to notify the appropriate authority which conducts the search of the lawyer’s statutory duty of
